FOR JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

I announce myself as a candidate for the honorable office of Justice of the Peace of the 1st Precinct, which I have no doubt I will discharge to the best of my knowledge.

We are authorized to announce Mark B. Broughton as a candidate for Justice of the Peace of the 2nd Precinct, which I have no doubt I will discharge to the best of my knowledge.

What is it that men call for when they have a lame horse? Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Another of Jacksonville's fair daughters returned home in the person of Miss Lizzie Burke. She has been off attending school.

Mr. C. J. Porter has laid on our table a bloom of cotton of the 10th of June. Mr. Porter is an energetic young man.

We regret to announce that Katie, infant daughter of Maj. B. C. Wyly, died in town on last Tuesday, aged 20 months.

Remember that Kendall's Spavin Cure will do all they claim for it. Try a bottle. Read the Advertisement.

We are glad to say that our esteemed townsman, Maj. Fullinwider, is gradually recovering from a serious spell of sickness.

Don't drive a lame horse when you can get Kendall's Spavin Cure for $1.00, it is worth $5. Read the Advertisement.

On last Saturday, Miss Fanny Korney, who has been attending college at Tuscaloosa, returned home to spend the summer vacation.

Parties who contemplate attending the meeting at the Y. M. C. A. as delegates of Cross Plains are requested to communicate the fact at once to Mr. M. E. Moody of that place.

The price of the Republican from now until after the November election will be fifty cents cash. This is a low campaign rate and should be accepted by all not now subscribers.

The school notice of Mr. Russell was sent in for last week or the week before, but its publication was neglected owing to the continued absence of the editor. He is in no way to blame for the delay.

We will print election tickets of the legally prescribed size for three dollars per thousand. As we may have to send the job to another office and guarantee payment, we shall require all candidates to send in the money with their orders.

Our readers have increased to such an extent late that we have not been able to send papers to new subscribers each week from the week their names were sent in. From this on we will be able to fill orders for papers as fast as they come in.

The card of Mr. Hudson, declining the race for Representative was received last week, but was not published by an oversight. The editor is absent so much in the canvass that he cannot give the paper that supervision he would like to, and friends must overlook neglect of this kind. We are sorry that for the same reason, the appointment of the school fund sent to us by the County Superintendent did not appear.

We clip from the Christian Observer, Louisville, Ky., the following complimentary to our townsman, Jno. M. Caldwell. Mr. Caldwell is certainly highly gifted and always acquires himself well in any position in which he may be placed.

The exercises of the annual examination and commencement of the Rome Female College were highly interesting, impressive and useful. The literary address, delivered by R. S. Jeffries, Esq., of Atlanta, attracted marked attention. The address of J. M. Caldwell, Esq., of Jacksonville, Ala., to the alumni, was distinguished for its rare beauty, force of thought and the elegance of its delivery.

A SAD ACCIDENT.—One of the saddest accidents, which resulted in the death of a good woman, we have ever been called upon to record occurred near this place Saturday last. A little boy of Mr. George Whites was playing with a gun which was thought not to be loaded. His mother was in the yard approaching the deer in which this little fellow sat, when he snapped it. The charge exploded and the entire contents were received by the lady in her breast and head, killing her almost instantly.

ONLY A WORD.

Only a word! A little winged word
Blown through the busy town,
Lighter than thistle down,
Lighter than dust by riving bee or bird
Brushed from the blossoming lily's golden crown
Borne by here and there,
Off at the summer's end,
About men's doors the sunny stillness stirred.
Only a word!
To pierce and sting and scar
The heart whose peace a breath of blame could mar.
Only a word, a little word that fell Unheeded as the dew
That from the dawning blue
Of summer midnight softly steals, to tell
Its tale of singing brook and star-dell
In tender welcome street.
Where, pale with dust and heat,
The little window flower in workman's cell
Its drooping bell
Uplifts to greet the kiss it knows so well;
A word—a drop of dew!
But oh, its touch could life's last hope renew.

The Captain's Daughter.

"No," said I, "you shan't have him."
"Oh, pa!" said she, "but I love him so
—I love him so dearly."
"I don't care," said I, "A common sailor like him!" and then she bellowed
and wiped her eyes, as might have been expected of a girl.
My girl was a beauty, and she was the only one I had—the only one I ever had—
and I owned a boat, and I was known everywhere as Captain Parker, of the Saucy Jane, and all I had Jennie would have some day; and was it likely I'd give her to Jack Blaze, as he was before the mast?
No!
Well, I set my foot down, and supposed
the game was over. But, lo and behold!
what should I see one day when I came home from the river but a couple of people swinging on my gate!
It was Jack Blaze and Jennie, and his arm was around her waist.
I bolted in between 'em like a shell, and
I ordered Jennie to her room, and I ordered Jack away, and I told him what would happen if I saw him swinging on my gate again.
"If you weren't her father, sir," said
Jack, "I'd not bear such words from you;
but, as it is, you're an old man—"
With that I fired a flower pot at him and called him a confounded mutineer, and he shrieked off.
"Jennie," said I, "I've done well by you—your old father has done well by you, and how should I help it? For Jennie had come to play the pianer, or had you taught which is the same thing, and you've got
one. You dress in silks, and I keep a servant for you, and I've got you down in my will for all I shall leave, and how do you use me? While I'm away following the water you mutiny. Now, I'm sorry to punish you. I don't leave you alone, and I'll look in the house and take you along with me on my trips. The cabin is comfortable and you'll not suffer, and if you don't like it you shall jump it. Keeping company with a fellow like that! Ugh!"
"Don't be cross, papa," said Jennie.
"I'd like to be, I'm sure. As for Jack,
he's the best fellow I know, and I'll keep company with no one else, but if you don't like it yet you'll wait."
"Wait!" says I. "Wait! Why, if I wanted you to marry Jennie, there's the captain of a steamer told me last week I'd
the prettiest daughter of any man he knew,
and that he was tired of single life. The captain of a steamer, Jennie, think of that!"
"I don't believe he's a sailor as Jack,"
said Jennie, "and I love Jack."
Then I shook her. I'm sorry to say I shook her, and the next day I had her trunk sent down to the boat and took her under my arm to the same place.
The cabin was good enough for a queen,
and the little stateroom a picture, and she seemed to like it.
You'd have thought I was giving her a trunk instead of punishing her.
She used to sit out on deck all the fine
days, with knitting and sewing, or a book,
and she sang to me evenings.
But she didn't give up, not even when she saw the captain—six feet three; handsome as a picture.
No, she stuck to Jack, and I stuck out against him as she would, and so we sailed up and down the river, and Summer went and Autumn came, and Winter was a-coming, but my girl was obstinate as ever.
It was my last trip.
All Winter, after the river was frozen,
the Saucy Jane lay at the dock.
"If you were a good, obedient girl," said
I, "I shouldn't have locked you up; but as it is, wait."
So I kissed her—I was glad to remember afterward that I kissed her—and I victu-aled the cabin, and locked the door and put the key in my pocket, and off I went.
I had to go a distance out of town, and
there, when I settled my business, I dined,
and it was evening before I got back to the Saucy Jane, or, rather, to Poplartown,
where she lay.
I thought to myself, as I came down,
that I had never seen the place so busy, but as I neared the dock, I saw that something had happened.
There was a crowd there, and people were talking and shaking their heads, and somehow I couldn't see the smoke-stack of the Saucy Jane peer through the shadows
as I might, nor the red and green lights at her head, nor any sign of her, and a great fear crept into my heart, and I began to shak, and shiver.
"It's only the fog," said I; but there was no fog.
"It's dark," said I, but the darker it was the brighter the lights would have shone
out.
Then all trembling and shaking like an old man—like my old grandfather, who had the palsy, used to do, I remember thinking
—I caught hold of a man who was pushing and said:
"Look here, man, what's the matter?
What's the crowd about? What's happened?"
"It's the little steambot down there,"
said the man; "the Saucy Jane. She's been run into and sunk by a coal boat. The captain was away they say, and the men went on a spree. Only the cabin boy was there;
they picked him up. You can just see her smoke-stack above the water. The coal boat was hurt a bit, too. She's lying out there."

"Oh, my God!" said I. "My daughter!"

Then I didn't know what happened, but I found myself in the doctor's ship pretty soon and a crowd about me, and heard
some one saying softly:
"His daughter was aboard. She went down with the boat."
"I looked her in!" said I. "Wretched old brute that I am! I looked her in that cabin; I murdered her—I, her father! The boat was locked and the windows small,
and I looked her in to drown like a rat!"
Then I went off again, and it was all a horrible dream, until I awoke to find it was night, and I was alone in bed, and I saw a man sitting beside me.
"Who is this?" I asked, not recognizing him.
"It's Jack Blaze, Captain. Do you find yourself better?"
"Do you think I want to be better?" I said. "I want to die and go to Jennie,
I murdered her."
"No, no, Captain," said Jack softly to me. "You looked her up from her true
love as loved her, but you didn't know what was coming."
"Oh, if I could die this minute," said I.
"Jack, if I have a pistol put it to my head! My little girl!"
"Well, she is safe from marrying me,
Captain," said Jack. "I suppose that's a comfort to you."
"Oh, Jack!" said I. "Oh, Jack Blaze,
there's nothing I'd deny her! She might marry a chimney-sweep, and I'd give her my blessing; let alone a good sailor like you, and I know nothing against, but that he's what I was thirty years ago. Oh, Jack, if Jennie could come back to life, I'd give her to you and be happy; but it's no
use, she's drowned."
"Captain," said Jack Blaze, bending over me. "I don't feel sure of that."
"Oh!" said I.
"To be sure," said he, "if she was in the cabin, locked up as you left her, she'd have drowned certain sure; but she mayn't
have been."
"Indeed," said Jack, "I know she wasn't."
"Oh, Lord, help me! Don't torture me," said I. "Speak out."
"She wasn't, Captain," said Jack, "for fifteen minutes after you left I went aboard, burst open the door—there was no one
there but the cabin boy—and took her out.
We went to the cabin together and we had a lovely day. The Saucy Jane's cabin was stove in the cockpit walked straight into the cabin, Captain, and it's God's mercy I took her out."
Then I heard a dear sweet voice, crying
out:
"Jack, open the door; let me come to papa."
I hadn't cried before since I was flogged
at school, but I cried like a baby then, and how should I help it? For Jennie had come out of the grave as it seemed to me, and was holding my hand in her arm, and kissing me, and calling me her darling.
I was so happy I thought I should die,
and I never remembered that I had lost the Saucy Jane until the next morning, though
the boat was the very apple of my eye.
I own as much now, and Jack and I take her up and down the river, and she has Jennie goes with us very often, for she married Jack Blaze last Christmas, and I like the lad—yes, I like him almost as well as Jennie does. I think for if I had been left to myself, and he had not set himself against me that dreadful day, I should have no daughter now, and I would be her mur-derer.

Our "Pinafore."

"We'll have a boat, and not a horse this vacation," roared our hopeful, just out of school and just in his teens. "Because when we've got a boat, we've got it, and horse always eats his head off, so say nothing of shoeing and keeping the wagon in repair."
So the boat was purchased, a second hand
flat bottomed punt, and after a few days I heard little besides her model.
Being the exchequer of the family, the first draft made was for "painting," and "caulking,"—"because" she needed "fixing up," and "like all other row-boats she leaked." For two more days the entire conversation was devoted to the appearance of
"her bottom,"—"putting" her seams,"
and "the prettiest colors for her craft."
Once again in the water, she was found to "yaw around badly," where a rudder was decided to be the thing. Consequently a carpenter was enlisted and a rudder such as a house carpenter and land lubber would fashion was made for the Pinafore.
In pulling about the river, on the banks
our hopeful discovered a sailor in the form of a boat-builder, who rented all styles of well made crafts, to make others dissatisfied with their own. The first of this old fellow's suggestions was a sail for the Pinafore. Therefore, the oars, which by the way, were just paid for (the old ones having been "spoiled"), were looked upon and disdain by our son and heir, who began boasting his breeches and donning the manner of a skipper. The sail was made and stopped, and we supposed the goal reached,
when a "leechboard" was found indispensable.
This added, there is nothing now desired,
but a new Pinafore "built to sail."
Bar-kow, not an old tub altered, over. Barking the daily renewal of a sponge, an occasional rowlock, and rope and float, which are stolen about every other night, we sail quietly forward, anticipating the new Pinafore which the old squire has promised to "build cheap during Winter months."

Street Sprinkling in Paris.

The City of Paris employs one or two very effective devices for street sprinkling,
one of these being a tank, or oblong box,
made of sheet iron, and which has a seat
for the driver, whence the tank can be operated. The capacity of this tank is sometimes 240 gallons, and it works on a siphon feet wide at each passage; it is propelled after a run of from 1,500 to 2,000 feet, according to the contents of the tank. The filling is done by a leather or India rubber hose screwed to hydrants under the sidewalks, and so spaced that the tanks have only short distances to run when emptied. One tank suffices for an area of two and a half acres of metalled surface, or five acres of paved streets. Hand sprinklers are used for the drains placed at suitable distances, and the apparatus which is from forty to fifty feet long, can, with a head of fifty feet, accomplish the task of throwing a jet of forty feet amplitude.

Gen. Forrest's Game of Poker.

Several years ago General Forrest visited Nashville, and stopped at the old City Hotel. That night, several gentlemen called to see him, among them a gentleman well connected with the Banner. The room had been crowded during the early part of the night, and Forrest had received the usual attention bestowed on him. Now, however,
he was sitting off by himself, and appeared tired and tired out. Our informant, wishing to have a talk with him about himself,
sought him and entered into conversation
with him.

"General," says he, "I've heard you were a great poker player in your time."
"Yes," says the general, "I have played some, and my eyes began to sparkle with the memory of old times, and he at once steamed interest in the subject, for he knew that no one was fonder of recounting his wonderful exploits.

"How much, general, was the largest stake you ever played?"
"I once called $48,000 in New Orleans,"
said he.
"Did you win?"
"What was your hand, general?"
"It was three kings."

"But," says he, "the hardest game I ever played was at Memphis. Just after the war closed me and my wife went to Memphis, and stopped at the Wolsheim.
The next morning we got our things together, and I emptied all of my pockets out of my trunk on the floor, and Mary, (I'm not certain his wife's name was Mary, but that will do for the tale) went over and over them, hunting for something to raise money out of. I emptied my pockets and Mary emptied her's, and between us we had $7.30. After lunching over everything we found none, every man's pocket owed us either dead or broke. I had not one single paper on which I could raise a cent out."

"After we got through the pile I looked at Mary and Mary looked at me. 'Now what's to be done, Mary,' says I. 'I don't know,' says she, 'but the Lord will provide.'
You see, Mary was one of the best women
in the world, and she had a heap of faith in her religion. I looked at her straight for a long time, and at last says: 'Mary, you are a mighty good woman, and I'm going to tell you something. There's to be a big dinner at — this evening, and I'm invited.
There's always play going at that house, and I reckon you're right about it. But things have become desperate with us, and somehow I feel if you wouldn't be again me, but would play for me, I could make a raise to-night.'

"Says she: 'Bedford, I can't do it. It's wrong for you to do it, and I'd a heap ratter you could do it.'"
"But Mary," says I, "I never was in such a fix before. Here we are with no money but $7.30, and that won't pay our tavern bill. I can't lose no more than that for I swear I won't bet on a credit. If I lose that I'll come home; and if I win then we'll have something to start on."

"Well, I argued and argued with her, but she wouldn't say yes. But at last she says:
"Bedford, I know your mind is set on it, and I know you are going to bet, wither I am willin' or not; so I won't say nothing more about it."
"So, somehow, I felt when I started that she was for me, and I just knowed how 'twould be."

"Well, I went sometime before dinner, and, sure enough, they were at it. They had three tables—one had a quarter ante,
one a half, and one a dollar and a half.
I wanted my seven dollars to last as long as I could make it, so I set out with the half table. I was on until dinner, and by that time I had enough to do better; and after we had eat, I sat down to the dollar-and-a-half table. Sometimes I won, and then again I'd lose on until about midnight, and then I had better luck. I know'd Mary was setting up and praying; I felt like it, and it made me cool. I set my last days by my skin on the floor, and every time I'd win I'd drop the money in the hat.
We played on, and I didn't know how much I'd won. I didn't keep any count, but I know'd I was winning."

"I thought maybe I'd won a hundred dollars, or maybe two hundred dollars, but I didn't know. I set them down until they broke, and then I took my hat up on both hands and mashed it on my head and went home without taking it off. When I got to my room there sat Mary in her gown, and the bed wasn't mashed. She'd set up all night waiting for me. She seemed tired and anxious, and though she looked mighty hard at me she didn't say a word
until she saw me, and then she pulled off
my hat with both hands I emptied it all right in her gown. And then we set down and counted it."

"How much was there, general?"
"Just fifteen hundred dollars even,"
said he. "And that," added the general, as he walked off, "give me a start."

A Chance for Work.

One morning I walked out by myself.
All along the marsh road the farmers were busy with their mowers mowing and turning their hay. A couple of regularly trained tramps, idle and aimless as myself, and much better acquainted with the road, passed me, and I tagged along in their longing wake. Presently the voice of the farmer came over the sweet-scented meadows:
"Hallo!"
The tramps halted. "Hallo yourself," shouted one of them.
"Do you want to hire?" yelled the farmer.
Judge of my astonishment when both
tramps chorused back:
"Yes."

"Well, I thought, they aren't American tramps, because they wouldn't disgrace
the profession in this way. But I stood still to listen and watch, for it was an unusual sight; two tramps going to work."
"Then come over here!" yelled the farmer, and the two fellows sprang over the fence and trudged across the meadow with the brisk air of men who really wanted
work and meant business. The farmer stood still, leaning on his pitchfork, gazing intently at his motley figures. Presently his voice broke the silence once more,
"Don't that other fellow want to hire,
too?" he yelled.

The two tramps turned and glanced at me for a reply. I shook my head sadly,
but firmly, and moved on, without waiting to hear the farmer's muttered comments on my laziness. An American may die, but he never works.

Good Housekeeping.

In the first place, the thorough housekeeper feels that the successful management of her domestic duties requires much thought and attention. She is, therefore, willing to expend some of her money on
it. Now, suppose she set aside one hour each morning, and decide to devote that entirely to her house. Let the lar-dest first be visited, and the ways and means for the day's food be well considered before
the orders be given; and then, if possible,
let all derogatory to be soon studying a cookery book; we must be very perfect if we can learn nothing from other sources.

Endeavor to have a change of food, and also a variety in the way of serving it—in short, study your daily dinner. Have a book up-stairs in which you enter all the orders and quantities which should be given to the tradespeople each day, and should the cook order extra or different things, let her understand that you intend to be the dispenser of your own income. A good housekeeper will have some plan in her mind for the week's food. She will know when the cook should have sufficient stock to make soup; and every housewife will soon find how expecting the soup to be made, and explaining how it must be done,
will form the habit of having it done.

Our servants are very much what we make them, and it has been the lazy and inefficient system that housekeeping has degenerated into that has made servants what they are. In factories and workshops, the foreman or forewoman exercises constant supervision over the workpeople; so also should our servants be looked after. After the kitchen is attended to, walk up stairs
and see if the rest of the work is properly performed. Probably you have given some order, see if it has been executed, and you wish. This general supervision will be ten-times more effective than the usual fault-finding by fits and starts—a grand row
and then, when both mistress and maid lose the control of their tempers, and which probably ends in notice to quit being given from one side to the other. Lastly, pay your bills yourself; it brings you into contact with your tradespeople; it lets you know more fully the current prices of articles. Now, your hour's time well employed, and done to the best of your ability, dismiss the subject from your mind. Do this every day, and your servants will all day, always remember something about their duties, and above and beyond all, be morally courageous. In a home that is well and conscientiously managed, it will be impossible to find discontent and unhappiness.

A Fisherman's "Tall Yarn."

Sixty miles from Brooklyn, on Long Island, and there is a small village well known as a favorite resort for fishermen. Its natives all own boats, and are celebrated for their skill with the hook and line. Last week
the writer and friend stood upon the shores
of its expansive bay gazing in admiration upon a large fleet of fishing-boats, which were anchored there. While thus engaged we were joined by a low-sized, well-beaten boat of the sea. It approached us slowly, raised its battered straw hat, and said:

"Just arrived, gentlemen? Reckon you've come down to take a hack at the blue fish."
"That is our intention," we said. "Have you a boat fit for the purpose?"
"Well, you're right, gentlemen. Do you see that sloop yonder?" and the old man extended a stump of a forefinger in the direction of a crummy-looking, small-sized boat lying at anchor all alone, as if she did not deem herself fit company for her more modern-looking sisters. She was painted a dirty yellow, with a faded blue streak above the water line, and she possessed a decidedly unimpressive appearance. This was suggested to the old man in a manner which was not calculated to hurt his feelings.

"I'll allow she ain't much on style,"
said he. "And if yer want a boat with value cushions, where yer kin lay with yer head in yer gal's lap and munch away
while she reads poetry to yer, she ain't the craft for yer; but if yer wants a solid craft that ain't afraid of wind or water to do yer fishing in, there's your boat and I'm the man kin sail her."

There was something in the force of his argument that led us to place confidence in him, and in two minutes a satisfactory bargain was made. We trudged back to the hotel, at which, under the inspiration of sundry potatoes, the old man grew confidential and voluble.

"Gentlemen," said he, "when you've heard what I'm a-going to tell you'll find there ain't no better boat in the bay than the Saucy Matilder. I calls her Saucy
Matilder after the youngest gal of Scudde-Conking, who owns that big house down on the Point. I got an odd job now and then during the winter down to the Point and I learned the boat out of—"
"Gratitude," we were greeted.

"That's the word, gentlemen. Well, as I was saying, a few summers ago there was a couple of young student chaps came down from York, and they hired me for a week to take 'em fishin' and sailin'." Well, the first day we ketches sixty-five blue-fish and Spanish mackerel, and when we got home
the fellows' hands, as was used to hard work, was all cut and blistered. I doctored 'em with sweet oil and flour, but they took a long time to heal, and they were glad to get home when they were here.
Of course, this put an end to their fishin';
but they were gentlemen, and they stuck to their bargain, and took out the week in sailin' over the bay. They was very fond of sailin' along the beach and gatherin' shells and gull's eggs and beach plants and sea-weeds, and all that kind of trash—"

"Well, I don't think it'll hurt me," he said, in answer to an interruption, and he poured out a half tumbler of Madeira.
"Gulls a-fecin'," sez I. Mayhap a school of bunker or some dead sharks is a-comin' through the inlet and the creatures is a-fecin' on 'em. Howsomever, we'll run down and see." With that I shook the reefs out in the mainsail, and away she flew.
Gentlemen, when I got beyond that Point I saw a sight what I'll never see again. Right in the middle of the channel the waves was a-bilin' four feet high, and they was alive
with fish; blue-fish, gentlemen, and whoop-ers at that. On both sides of the channel the water was as quiet as the flicker in that bottle. Now, boys, there ain't no sprier old man in Suffolk County, if I do say it, myself, and I don't allow no man to give me pints about blue-fishin', and in less'n a minute I had two outriggers and four star-lines a-driftin' in the water behind us.

"We sails up the south 'war rig'
long-side of these rollin' waves, what I remind yer of stoopin' along a stone wall, and there I see fish a-dartin' and a-flyin' like shrimp in a box. They rushed on them lines a hundred at once, and, whish I away went the whole tackle. That happened agin and agin until I hadn't a spud aboard
the boat, but I warn't comin' ashore without some of them fish; not by no means;
so an idea struck.

"Boys," says I, "be you game?"
"We be," says they, and they looked game, spite of their sore hands.
"Will you fine me in don't what no mortal man has ever done before?"
"We will," says they; "we'll stick through thick and thin."
"With that I puts the boat about and falls down to where the sea was the roughest." "Boys," says I, "unree your agin' that line, and hold on to your lives. Don't move till I say 'Scoop!' and then you scoop." There was a stiff breeze from the north-west and I depended on that to help me through. I got astride the hells and planted the bow for a big wave that looked like it was a-going to swallow us. Saucy Ma-tilder knew her reputation was at stake, and she wasn't a-going to lose it. She dashed right into it like a duck, and away she went two feet under water, and right below that school of fish that was a-fightin' and a-bilin' right over us. "Scoop," says I, and the way them fellers gathered in them fish was a sight to see. When we got out into smooth water, the cook-pot was durned deep with them fish a-floppin' and a-tryin' their best to get out. They was a sloin' over the decks, and when me and the young fellers had got 'em all stowed away, the gunnels of the Saucy Matilder was only an inch out of the water, and three men a-strain when they was never came back from a fishin' excursion. Why, these gentlemen couldn't raise their arms to their heads
for high on three days.

"How many fish did you capture?" we asked him.
"Well, gen'tlemen, by actool count there was just 1,167 blue-fish, and not one of them weighed less'n ten pounds. That's about countin' a hundred fish, and I ketches that we clucked overboard. I felt as if I'd done my duty that day, and I didn't blow much about it; but, somehow the story got out, and down comes some of them newspaper fellers from New York, and they offers me as high as $25 to tell the story; but I wasn't agin' to give it away.
But I heard last week them two young fellers was drowned in a fresh-water place in York State, and I felt somehow as the story had to be told some day or other. That's why I told yer to-day."

"When did this occur, Cap?" asked the landlord, who had been a silent listener.

The Republican. SATURDAY, July 10, 1880. For President, WINFIELD S. HANCOCK Of Pennsylvania. For Vice President, WILLIAM H. ENGLISH Of Indiana. Democratic State Ticket. For Chief Justice Supreme Court, ROBERT C. BRICKELL. For Associate Justices, AMOS R. MANNING, GEORGE W. STONE. For Governor, RUFUS W. COBB. For Secretary of State, WILLIAM W. SCREWS. For Attorney General, HENRY C. TOMPKINS. For Treasurer, ISAAC H. VINCENT. For Auditor, JESSE M. GARMICHAEL. For Superintendent of Education, HENRY C. ARMSTRONG. For Chancellor Eastern Division, NEIL S. GRAHAM. For Judge 12th Judicial Circuit, LEROY F. BOYD. For State Senate Seventh District, L. W. GRANT. Capt. J. S. Winter, of Montgomery, who recently announced himself as an Independent candidate for Circuit Judge of the Montgomery Circuit, has written a letter to the Advertiser, declining the race. After trial he is convinced that this is no good year for Independentists. He found the tremendous pressure of Democratic organization too much for him. Winfield S. Hancock. Winfield S. Hancock comes of revolutionary and patriotic parents. His grandfather and great grandfather were soldiers on the side of independence in the revolutionary struggle. His father was a native of Pennsylvania where the son was born on the 14th of February 1824. His early education was received at the academy in Norristown. Was noted for his thoughtful habits. Passed his examination at West Point with credit and entered the service of his country. His first opportunity for distinction was in the war with Mexico, where he displayed his gallantry from San Antonio to the city of Mexico. He was a Brigadier-General in the Union army in the late unhappy struggle where he still played the part of a gallant soldier and a noble and faithful citizen. In 1867, he was appointed to the command of the 5th Military District, composed of the States of Texas and Louisiana, under the reconstruction laws. It was while in that command that he became famous as a defender of constitutional government and civil liberty. He refused to become a tool for fanatics in power and in defense of his course while there in command he announced "that the great principles of American liberty are still the lawful inheritance of the people, and ever should be. The right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be preserved." Grant's persecutions nor his infuriated minions could terrify him from acting in accordance with those great fundamental principles, for he wrote about that time to a friend, "nothing can intimidate me from doing what I believe to be honest and right." The above is a hasty and very imperfect sketch of the next President of the United States. He is a statesman with a spotless record, over him "the boys in gray and blue" will throw up their hats in response to the question: "Who is the friend of the constitution of his country and to civil liberty?" Over him they will bury the last vestige of the bloody shirt and over his grave, instead of hearing the deafening roar of cannon, will be heard their thunder saluting constitutional rights and announcing to the civilized world the overthrow of the enemies of their birth rights. Not only was the proposition to nominate the colored man Bruce, for Vice President treated with contempt by the Radical convention at Chicago, but the members who proposed Southern names for the office, of either white scalawags or carpetbaggers were hissed or hooted down. So it was when the names of Tom Settle, Duskin, were proposed. It was so when Houck offered old Horace Maynard, of Tennessee, and if anything, it was worse when Chambers, of Texas, attempted to bring out Davis of that State. All which efforts another proof that Northern Radicals care nothing for Southern Radicals but to use them for their own purposes. Exchange.

From the Montgomery Advertiser.] The Rebel Yell in Alabama. Mr. Paul Stobich, of Alabama, was one of the last members of the committee to reach this city. When he entered the committee rooms he was asked what he could say about the condition of affairs in Alabama. He said he was sorry he could not give encouraging news. After the failure to nominate Gen. Grant at Chicago the Bourbons of Alabama became bold, threatening and violent. "I came here direct from Montgomery," stated this gentleman, "and the New York Times recently contained a report of a breaking up of a Republican meeting at Montgomery. We thought that interruption, about which the Times' readers and newspaper professors were so indignant, would be the last about it. We should have tried to compel it. Our friends were here to hold another meeting. The speakers were again pelted with rotten eggs, interrupted by much cheering and a storm of oaths directed against all Radicals, and by shouts for Hancock, which invariably ended in a prolonged rebel yell. By injudicious management the party strength has been wasted in Alabama. We hope to accomplish something in the way of electing a Congressman, perhaps way of electing a Congressman, perhaps protected in the exercise of their privileges of meeting and speaking, we shall be as completely overpowered as we have repeatedly been." The above is from a New York dispatch to the Philadelphia News. If STROBACH tells the truth on his party hereabouts it must be composed of the puniest and most pusillanimous set on the continent. If he has slandered them they ought to expose and expel him incessantly. Although we reside here in Montgomery, and our office is not a stone's throw from the spot where this prodigious Democratic storm is reported to have occurred, the foregoing paragraph is the first intimation that we have had that rebel yells and rotten eggs and storms of oaths broke in upon the vain efforts of the poor Republicans of Montgomery to ratify GARFIELD and ARTHUR. That some Democrats did shout for HANCOCK at the Radical meeting, is true. They should not have done so. On the contrary, if they can't keep quiet at such meetings, they ought to keep away, and hereafter they will have to do so. But their HANCOCK hurrahing is nothing like the great thing STROBACH painted it. On inquiry, we ascertain one man was arrested for having an egg and intention to throw. He was fined heavily by the Mayor for it. No egg, as far as we are able to learn, was thrown at any speaker. On the very evening that all this Democratic hollaballoo is thus reported to have scattered, like autumn leaves, STROBACH and his unhappy family, just as they were doing their best to "ratify," the Democratic party was holding a ratification at a different place in the city. It would have been a most remarkable thing indeed if Democrats should have deserted their meeting in order to entertain the Republican pow-wow with "rebel yells" and rotten eggs. The first meeting to which the paragraph refers was interrupted as we have several times stated, by the opposing Republican faction. During the day a Republican mob had assembled in the Court House, in calling it a mob we certainly do it not the slightest injustice. For we doubt if ever any political assemblage was ever before disgraced by such outrageous yelling, cursing, bawling and bellowing as distinguished that Republican "convention," so called. It reached such a degree of disgracefulness and uncontrollable violence and uproar that the chairman and others appealed to Democrats for protection. Finally in the midst of confusion worst confounded the meeting was adjourned. It was the work of this shameful burlesque upon nominating conventions that the first meeting was called to ratify the egg business at that meeting was in charge of disgraced Radicals who did not want to ratify. If STROBACH would only give his own experience in the wars of the Republican factions in this county, he might create something of a sensation among his astounded hearers, and without doing the least violence to truth. And he had just as well stick to the truth. For all the tales his fertile brain can invent from now until November will do no good. His De Golyer GARFIELD is "gone up." His wild hunt for office has nearly ended. ELECTION NOTICE. THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Calhoun county. Notice is hereby given that J. David Z. KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE. The most successful remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects, and does not blister. Read proof below. From Rev. P. N. GRANGER, Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District. St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 20, 1880. Dr. D. J. Kendall & Co., Gents: In reply to your letter, I will say that my experience with Kendall's Spavin Cure has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago, I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks. When he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered the cause was a bone spavin, I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found. Respectfully yours, CHAS. E. PARKER. Perseverance Will Tell. Stoughton, Mass., March 16th, 1880. Dr. D. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—In justice to you and myself, I think that I ought to let you know that I have moved two long spavins with Kendall's Spavin Cure, one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off, and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me, its sale will be very great. Respectfully yours, CHAS. E. PARKER. Kendall's Spavin Cure. Kellers Island Erie Co. O. Feb. 28, 1880. Dr. D. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure on a bone spavin, and am pleased to report that it has taken the enlargement completely off. It took only one bottle to perform the cure. I am confident it is properly used, it will do all you claim for it. Yours truly, C. M. LINCOLN. STATEMENT MADE UNDER OATH. To Whom It May Concern:—In the year 1875, I treated with Kendall's Spavin Cure, a bone spavin of several months' growth, nearly half as large as a hen's egg and completely stopped the lameness and removed the enlargement. I have worked the horse ever since very hard, and he never has been lame, nor could I ever see any difference in the size of the hock joints since I treated him with Kendall's spavin Cure. R. A. GAINES, Emsburgh Falls Vt., Feb. 25th, 1879. Sworn and subscribed to before me this 25th day of Feb. A. D. 1879. JNO. G. BEEBE, Justice of the Peace. KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE On Human Flesh. PATTON'S MILLS, WASHINGTON CO. N. Y., Feb. 21, 1878. B. J. KENDALL, M. D., DEAR SIR: The particular case on which I used your Spavin Cure was a malignant ankle spavin of sixteen months' standing. I had tried many things, but in vain. Your Spavin Cure put the foot to the ground again, and for the first time since hurt, in a natural position. For a family liniment it exceeds anything we ever used. Yours truly, REV. M. E. BELL, Pastor M. E. Church, Patton's Mills, N. Y. Kendall's Spavin Cure is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every part of the system, to remove any bony growth, sprains, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness and rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild, yet certain in its effects. Send address for full Illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever not with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for best as well as man. Price, $1 per bottle or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. D. J. KENDALL & CO., Emsburgh Falls, Vermont. A CARD. About three years ago we were requested by some of our employees to purchase sewing machines for them. After a careful examination of all the leading machines, we were convinced that the "White" was the best sewing machine manufactured, and we bought six. These instantly created a demand for more, and without special effort on our part, the demand has grown so that we are now selling 100 Machines a year and our sales are continually increasing. This is the best evidence of the superior merits of the "White." WOODSTOCK IRON COMPANY, Anniston, Ala. UNPARALLELED SUCCESS OF THE WhiteSewing Machine. BREAD UPON THE WATER.

Mid the losses and the gains;
Mid the pleasures and the pains,
And the hopes and the fears,
And the restlessness of years,
We repeat this promise o'er—
We believe it more and more—
Bread upon the waters cast
Shall be gathered at the last.

Gold and silver, like the sands,
Will keep slipping through our hands;
Jewels, gleaming like a spark,
Will be hidden in the dark.
Sun and moon and stars will pale,
But these words will never fail:
Bread upon the waters cast
Shall be gathered at the last.

Soon, like dust, to you and me,
Will our earthly treasures flee;
But the loving word that died
To another in his need,
They will be remembered;
They will live eternally—
Bread upon the waters cast
Shall be gathered at the last.

Fast the moments slip away,
Soon our mortal powers decay,
Low and lower sinks the sun,
What we must soon be done;
Then what rapture, if we hear
Thousand voices ringing clear—
Bread upon the waters cast
Shall be gathered at the last.

Why I Didn't Marry.

You see I was nineteen years old before I thought of such a thing as marrying. I was too bashful by half. I never used to kiss a girl at huskings or quilting frolics without feeling as if some one was pouring hot water down my back; and once, when a neighbor's daughter stayed at our house till nine in the evening (I believe she did it on purpose, too), and my father insisted that I should go home with her, I went out into the barn and cried an hour before I could make up my mind to go in and ask her the awful question.

The girls used to laugh at me some; but after all they seemed very willing to help me along; and so, when my nineteenth birthday came, I looked at myself in the glass, and says I:

"Joshiah, it's no use; you're darned good-looking, and you might have any girl you wanted. You ought to go a-courting. Suppose you begin to-night?"

From that moment the idea got into my head and there it stayed.

I dressed up and went to church, just as I always did, but I couldn't attend to the minister, nor the sermon. I sat mighty uneasy, and father watched me out of the corner of his eye, though he never said a word. He knew play well what I was thinking of, for he'd been there himself!

Deacon Billings' pew was right in front of ours, and he had just the prettiest girl for a daughter that ever wore a bonnet. I watched her awhile that day, and concluded I liked the way she managed things pretty well. So, after supper, thinks I:

"I'll go over to the old deacon's and see how they're getting along."

Father saw me sneaking up, but he didn't say anything, only gave me a wonderful cunning look.

When I got to the deacon's, they were all out in the kitchen but Rachel, and she was in the square room; and so after I had talked a spell with the old lady, she asked me in there and left us all alone. Ma'am Billings knew what was what, I can tell you.

Rachel was sitting up by the window, singing "Old Hundred." She didn't look very good-natured; but when I came in she brightened up wonderfully, and began to talk about the sermon, and the minister, and everything else that you can think of.

My gracious! How a woman's tongue can go when it gets started! If Rachel's didn't ache that night I shall lose my guess.

The old deacon brought us in some apples and buttermilk, and a pitcher of cider, and then told Rachel to cover up the fire when she went to bed.

The old man always was a sleepy-headed kind of a thing, and in about ten minutes afterwards I heard him snoring away as if he was on a wagon.

That time she took it pretty quietly, and after that I didn't stop to count the kisses. I was making up for lost time, and worked pretty steady. I can tell you. I've had some pretty good times since then, but none of them ever came up to that evening with Rachel Billings. It makes my heart beat to think of it even now.

Rachel got up at last and leaned over my chair to get an apple. Somehow or other her foot slipped and she came very near falling over. I caught her in my arms; and after I once had her there I didn't care about letting her go.

Creation! what a feeling that was! I felt just as I did the day when I took hold of an old Sam Jones had in a tub—an electric eel. I believe he called it "the eel," as to have the fun of seeing it give people shocks.

Well, as I was saying, Rachel was in my arms, and I fancied I was pretty near Paradise. I thought what a nice thing it would be if I could have the right to have her there always.

There was a chap that was almost always hanging around Rachel. His name was Thomas Wilder. He and I never had anything to say to each other; but I hated him now, just because he had been with her so much. So I thought how nice it would be to cut him out. I was nineteen and my father had nobody but me to leave his property to; and Rachel was a first-rate housekeeper, and would most likely be willing to wait a year or two for me. Even if I hadn't a red cent, and no way to get one, I should have done the same thing she was so confounded pretty.

"Rachel," says I, "I've been hunting after a wife for six months and I haven't seen any one I liked half as well as you. I came to see you to-night on purpose to ask you if you would marry me."

That was a tremendous story, for I'd never thought of such a thing till she fell into my arms; but I had read somewhere that "All is fair in love and war," and so I thought it wouldn't do any harm to coax her up a little.

My gracious! how she colored up the minute I spoke! She got up and looked straight at me for a spell and then said:

"Miss me, Mr. Jenkins! I thought you knew all the time that I was engaged to Tom Wilder. Where have you been all your life? Why, I'm going to be married next Sunday and should have been there, only Tom has cut his foot with an axe and can't walk."

"I hope to gracious he'll be a cripple all his life!" said I.

The next thing I knew, I was coming through our garden gate.

"Father hadn't gone to bed; I believe he knew I should come home with a flea in my ear. When I came in, he observed: 'Joshiah, when you want to visit old folks another Sunday night, just come to me, and I'll tell you a better place than Deacon Billings'."

I turned right around, just as mad as fire.

"Gaul darn it, father, I won't be laughed at by anybody! I've made a tangle fool of myself; but if ever I get caught in such a scrape again you may make my head for a foot-ball! I'll keep away from women after this—see if I don't!"

I kept my word. I board where there are as many as twenty women; but always, when I pass their bonnets and shawls in the entry, I turn my head right the other way, and—keep it there!

Rachel Billings cured me!

A few days since, a well-dressed couple, in the prime of life, stopped at a hotel in a neighboring town, and sending for a Justice of the Peace, informed that functionary that they wished to be married. The Justice said, "All right," and inquired their names.

They told him that it struck him as being the same service for the lady some years before. Upon inquiring if such was not the case, the lady said that she had been married previously.

"Have you a bill from your former husband?" asked Mr. Justice.

A Monkey's Fear of Serpents.

In the monkey house at the Philadelphia Zoological Garden a dead snake was coiled up in a newspaper, the corners of which were twisted together in such a manner that they would readily come undone, and the package was then set on the floor of a cage containing forty or fifty monkeys of a great variety of species. It was instantly spied by a female Cynopithecus, who was the principal leader in all the pranks with which the monkeys constantly amused themselves; she seized the paper by one corner and set off across the cage, dragging it behind her, evidently intending to have a good time with it. Before she had gone more than a few feet, the paper became unfolded and the snake slipped out. She instantly dropped the paper and, with her head over her shoulder, keeping an eye behind her, as Mrs. Lewis's wife must have looked back at the fascinating form of the electric of the plain. No sooner did the rest of the monkeys perceive the dreadful object by step, and formed in a circle of six or eight feet diameter, having for its centre the snake quietly coiled up on the floor.

Some, however, to touch it or go beyond the fascinat line of safety, with the exception of one large Macaque, the acknowledged leader of the cage, who cautiously approached and made an occasional snatch at the paper, apparently to see if the enemy was really as devoid of life as it appeared to be; all the others meanwhile looking on in breathless attention. At this point, the monkey which had previously been attached to the tail of the snake was gently pulled. The serpent lengthened slightly, and the monkeys fled up the sides of the cage, chattering like magpies; when they got to a safe distance they halted for observation, and after some moments, seeing no further sign of danger, they gradually returned, by ones, to their former position—the large ones in the front rank, and the smaller ones, crowded out by superior strength, forming behind and looking over their shoulders. This was continued for some hours without the slightest change in the disposition of the monkeys, all of their actions showing a most intolerable fear of the snake, mingled with an attraction or curiosity which would not allow them to remain away from it. This was a universal trait that not one of the monkeys in the cage was entirely free from it. The snake was finally taken out and several other animals belonging to the same class were put in its place, but with very different results.

Of a tortoise, for instance, and a small dead alligator, they were at first rather shy, but they at length began to touch them and in ten minutes they were playing with them and passing them from one to another with the greatest curiosity. The same snake was then shown, in turn, to animals belonging to a number of other orders: Carnivores, Rodents, Ungulates, Edentates, and Marsupials, but none of these, except a very few, showed any trace of the exception of a monkey, which finding it to be dead, seemed disposed to make a meal of it.

Every American, of course, is familiar with Mount Vernon, Va., either by actual sight or description. The tomb is a roomy brick vault, with an arched roof, and very substantial. Through an iron gate two sarcophagi are seen, the one of marble and the other of granite. Within this enclosure rests the remains of General George Washington. The coffin, which lies in the open vestibule of the vault proper, are of Pennsylvania marble; that of Washington bears an American shield, the other two, "Martha Washington," and "John and Mary Custis," are of Italian marble.

Just above and beneath the Unitarian church at Quincy, Mass. The tomb is in an apartment in the front part of the cellar under the church, walled in with large blocks of roughly-faceted granite. A granite slab, seven feet by three, with a huge clasp and padlock, and massive hinges of wrought iron, all red with rust, forms the door.

Placed within each chest, from a single block of stone. The grave of Thomas Jefferson is in a thick growth of woods, a few hundred yards to the right of the embowered road leading to Charlottesville, Va., up to Monticello. The spot is as lone some as a lover's solitude could desire. The grave is a simple, but noble, structure of brick, with a low, broad, and ten feet high, which on the south side has been topped over bodily, and now lies in level courses of brick and crumbling mortar level with the ground. James Madison lies buried on the place which he owned at the time of his death, at Montpelier, Va. The grave is a shaft over his grave, the centre of a large field, in a lot about 100 feet square, surrounded by a substantial brick wall five feet high. The remains of James Monroe sleep in Hollywood cemetery at Richmond, Virginia, at a point from which the eye can take in a great part of the city. The plot is 804 feet in area, and was bought by Gov. Wise for the State. Monroe died in New York in 1831, and it was not until twenty-seven years had elapsed that his body was removed to Richmond.

The grave of Martin Van Buren is in the northern corner of the cemetery at Kinderhook, Columbia county, New York. The remains of William Henry Harrison, the occupant for only one month of the President's chair, repose, with those of his wife and children, in a plain brick vault on the summit of a hillock at North Bend, Ohio, fifteen miles west of Cincinnati. Just ten yards east of Monroe's grave at Richmond is a turfed mound beneath which lies buried the body of John Tyler. At its head is a small maple tree, beneath which are the remains of a blooming green rose. The James K. Polk mansion is at the corner of Vine and Union streets, Nashville, Tenn. A few feet from the gate a white-shell path conducts to the tomb of the ex-President, which stands in the centre of a smooth grass-plot, encircled by another path of dazzling white shells, by which a clump of white lilies are growing. Zachary Taylor's body now occupies its third grave and the first time it was placed in a fourth. It was first placed in the cemetery at Washington, and thence removed to Taylor home, five miles back, of Louisville, Ky., whence a few months ago it was taken to Cave Hill cemetery, at Louisville.

In the course of the summer it will be taken to Frankfort, where over the State will erect an appropriate monument. The legislature at its last session appropriated $4,000 for this purpose, and Senator Beck has a bill before Congress for extending further aid to the project from the National Treasury.

Three miles north of Buffalo is Forest Lawn cemetery. Almost upon the crest of the hill and near the centre of the cemetery rises the obelisk of Scotch granite that marks the resting place of Millard Fillmore. The remains of Franklin Pierce were laid in the Minot cemetery, on Main street, in Concord, N. H. The Pierce lot is surrounded by a neat fence six feet high, traversed by concrete paths and, nearly added, though there are neither inclosures nor curbs. The grave of James Buchanan is in Woodward Hill cemetery, Westland, Penn., on a bluff in the southeastern part of the city. The lot is thirty by twelve feet, enclosed by a neat fence of black iron, with posts of mottled white and black granite at the corners. All the graves are a hedge of blossoming roses that interlock closely the iron bars. Abraham Lincoln, born in a log hut, is buried under a towering pile of marble, granite and bronze, in Oak Ridge cemetery, a mile and a half north of Springfield, Ill. The structure, 119x72 feet, is of New Haven granite, a concave dome of marble. The monument over Andrew Johnson's grave was unveiled recently. It stands on the summit of a lofty cone-shaped eminence half a mile southwest of the town of Greenville, Tenn.

In Little Rock, Arkansas, recently, a young man, whom it would no doubt be well to call James, fell in love, or thought he did, with a young lady whom it would be well to call Susan. Practical names, both of them. The fondness of James was returned. James told Susan that he loved her, and Susan told James that she loved him. James asked Susan to marry him, and Susan said that she would. The young man had spent sleepless nights in contemplating the prize he was attempting to win, but when he found that the pole of attraction had knocked the "persuasion" of Susan's affections he ceased tossing the cover at night and slept soundly. Finally he mused: "I don't love the girl. I wish I had not acted so rashly in engaging myself to her. It would almost break my heart if I were to tell her of my mistake. She is so affectionate. What a fool a man is!" Susan did not pass all this time without musing: "Women are so impulsive," she thought. "I am engaged to that man, and I declare that I do not love him. I would break the engagement, but he might kill himself. I don't know what to do. The parties continued to be affectionate towards each other, and the same grave doubts affected alike the mind of each. Several nights after the affectionate parties sat beside each other.

"Susan," remarked James, "do you think that a man should marry a woman when he doesn't love her, merely to preserve his honor?"

"No; do you?"

"I don't think that he should. By the way, Sue, I think that it would be better for you not to get married. I have been mistaken; I don't love you. I hope you will forgive me. I have wronged you."

"Glorious man," said the girl, "you have lifted a heavy weight from my heart. I do not love you, and the fear of fatal results has ever kept me from breaking my engagement."

"Is that so?" asked James, astonished.

"I speak truthfully."

"Well, I will be dog-gone. I thought that you cared for me."

Graves of the Presidents.

Every American, of course, is familiar with Mount Vernon, Va., either by actual sight or description. The tomb is a roomy brick vault, with an arched roof, and very substantial. Through an iron gate two sarcophagi are seen, the one of marble and the other of granite. Within this enclosure rests the remains of General George Washington. The coffin, which lies in the open vestibule of the vault proper, are of Pennsylvania marble; that of Washington bears an American shield, the other two, "Martha Washington," and "John and Mary Custis," are of Italian marble.

Just above and beneath the Unitarian church at Quincy, Mass. The tomb is in an apartment in the front part of the cellar under the church, walled in with large blocks of roughly-faceted granite. A granite slab, seven feet by three, with a huge clasp and padlock, and massive hinges of wrought iron, all red with rust, forms the door.

Placed within each chest, from a single block of stone. The grave of Thomas Jefferson is in a thick growth of woods, a few hundred yards to the right of the embowered road leading to Charlottesville, Va., up to Monticello. The spot is as lone some as a lover's solitude could desire. The grave is a simple, but noble, structure of brick, with a low, broad, and ten feet high, which on the south side has been topped over bodily, and now lies in level courses of brick and crumbling mortar level with the ground. James Madison lies buried on the place which he owned at the time of his death, at Montpelier, Va. The grave is a shaft over his grave, the centre of a large field, in a lot about 100 feet square, surrounded by a substantial brick wall five feet high. The remains of James Monroe sleep in Hollywood cemetery at Richmond, Virginia, at a point from which the eye can take in a great part of the city. The plot is 804 feet in area, and was bought by Gov. Wise for the State. Monroe died in New York in 1831, and it was not until twenty-seven years had elapsed that his body was removed to Richmond.

The grave of Martin Van Buren is in the northern corner of the cemetery at Kinderhook, Columbia county, New York. The remains of William Henry Harrison, the occupant for only one month of the President's chair, repose, with those of his wife and children, in a plain brick vault on the summit of a hillock at North Bend, Ohio, fifteen miles west of Cincinnati. Just ten yards east of Monroe's grave at Richmond is a turfed mound beneath which lies buried the body of John Tyler. At its head is a small maple tree, beneath which are the remains of a blooming green rose. The James K. Polk mansion is at the corner of Vine and Union streets, Nashville, Tenn. A few feet from the gate a white-shell path conducts to the tomb of the ex-President, which stands in the centre of a smooth grass-plot, encircled by another path of dazzling white shells, by which a clump of white lilies are growing. Zachary Taylor's body now occupies its third grave and the first time it was placed in a fourth. It was first placed in the cemetery at Washington, and thence removed to Taylor home, five miles back, of Louisville, Ky., whence a few months ago it was taken to Cave Hill cemetery, at Louisville.

In the course of the summer it will be taken to Frankfort, where over the State will erect an appropriate monument. The legislature at its last session appropriated $4,000 for this purpose, and Senator Beck has a bill before Congress for extending further aid to the project from the National Treasury.

Three miles north of Buffalo is Forest Lawn cemetery. Almost upon the crest of the hill and near the centre of the cemetery rises the obelisk of Scotch granite that marks the resting place of Millard Fillmore. The remains of Franklin Pierce were laid in the Minot cemetery, on Main street, in Concord, N. H. The Pierce lot is surrounded by a neat fence six feet high, traversed by concrete paths and, nearly added, though there are neither inclosures nor curbs. The grave of James Buchanan is in Woodward Hill cemetery, Westland, Penn., on a bluff in the southeastern part of the city. The lot is thirty by twelve feet, enclosed by a neat fence of black iron, with posts of mottled white and black granite at the corners. All the graves are a hedge of blossoming roses that interlock closely the iron bars. Abraham Lincoln, born in a log hut, is buried under a towering pile of marble, granite and bronze, in Oak Ridge cemetery, a mile and a half north of Springfield, Ill. The structure, 119x72 feet, is of New Haven granite, a concave dome of marble. The monument over Andrew Johnson's grave was unveiled recently. It stands on the summit of a lofty cone-shaped eminence half a mile southwest of the town of Greenville, Tenn.

In Little Rock, Arkansas, recently, a young man, whom it would no doubt be well to call James, fell in love, or thought he did, with a young lady whom it would be well to call Susan. Practical names, both of them. The fondness of James was returned. James told Susan that he loved her, and Susan told James that she loved him. James asked Susan to marry him, and Susan said that she would. The young man had spent sleepless nights in contemplating the prize he was attempting to win, but when he found that the pole of attraction had knocked the "persuasion" of Susan's affections he ceased tossing the cover at night and slept soundly. Finally he mused: "I don't love the girl. I wish I had not acted so rashly in engaging myself to her. It would almost break my heart if I were to tell her of my mistake. She is so affectionate. What a fool a man is!" Susan did not pass all this time without musing: "Women are so impulsive," she thought. "I am engaged to that man, and I declare that I do not love him. I would break the engagement, but he might kill himself. I don't know what to do. The parties continued to be affectionate towards each other, and the same grave doubts affected alike the mind of each. Several nights after the affectionate parties sat beside each other.

"Susan," remarked James, "do you think that a man should marry a woman when he doesn't love her, merely to preserve his honor?"

"No; do you?"

"I don't think that he should. By the way, Sue, I think that it would be better for you not to get married. I have been mistaken; I don't love you. I hope you will forgive me. I have wronged you."

"Glorious man," said the girl, "you have lifted a heavy weight from my heart. I do not love you, and the fear of fatal results has ever kept me from breaking my engagement."

"Is that so?" asked James, astonished.

"I speak truthfully."

"Well, I will be dog-gone. I thought that you cared for me."

"And I thought you cared for me."

"I'll be blithered if this affair hasn't got away with me. Say, Sue."

"Now let's look at this affair a little closer. We are both very frank. I think that frank people make the best husbands and wives. We understand each other first-rate. Tell me—don't you—that is, do you not entertain something of an affection for me?"

"Yes—yes. Don't you for me?"

"Yes. Suppose, as we understand one another so well, that we get married?"

Cats and Dried Peaches.

Down at Howell the other day an old woman about seventy years old boarded a Detroit, Lansing and Northern train to take to Detroit. Her baggage consisted of a large covered basket, and she wouldn't allow any hand to take it from her. She had scarcely got seated when the passengers were startled by a loud "Me-ow!" in the car, quickly followed by a "per-wow" and other "vows" too numerous to mention. While all were searching to discover the cat that lay so still as still as a poker and looked so much like a cat at the window. The sound continued, and a passenger finally peered around until he located the cat in her basket.

"Madam, are you taking that cat from one county to another?" he asked.

"What cat?" she snapped.

"Don't you know that under the laws of this State," he went on, "a person who moves a full-grown cat from one county to another without the written permission of the Swamp Land Commissioners is liable to a fine of $100?"

"Good lands! but I didn't know that?" she exclaimed, as she faced around.

"Women don't keep track of the laws as men do," he said. "Persons who take to see you take that cat through to Detroit; but there may be some one on this train just mean enough to inform against you and have you arrested. I'd let her out if I were you."

"Yes, I will, for I don't want to break any laws at my age."

She fumbled around the basket for a minute, and all of a sudden the cat jumped out. She alighted on the head of the man who put up the job, gave him several sharp digs, and then leaped from one to another like a squirrel, biting, spitting and clawing at everybody but the old woman. She sat like a statue, afraid of being suspected. When the feline had gone the length of the car she turned to an open window and shot out like a bullet, landing right-side up and making tracks for a barn in a field.

"Who brought that cat aboard?" he demanded the name of the person who owned that cat," she asked a man whose head had told her claws until the blood run.

No one answered. Several passengers looked straight at the old woman, who stood it for a minute and then lifted up her basket and called:

"If anybody wants to look among the dried peaches in this basket for a cat, as I do, so, you needn't all look at me as if I lived in the woods and didn't keep posted on law!"

Life on the Prairie.

NOTES TAKEN FROM THE SADDLE.

Sitting this evening in a chapeau de paille in the midst of a vast prairie, to which we have ridden in search of water, my thoughts are wandering back to my mountain home far away in Alabama. As I stop to dip a draught in my tin cup from the sluggish pool which is stagnating under the rays of a summer sun, a vision arises before me of a beautiful stream, pouring its treasures down the hillsides, rippling in melody across the green meadows, scintillating like diamonds, flashing like crystals; gleaming like burnished silver in the sunlight—clear and cold, refreshing as the dew that falls from heaven, far sweeter than the ambrosial nectar of the Gods, and more delightful than the sparkling juice of the grape which bubbles up from the wine presses of the Falterian hills. Never before did I fully realize the treasure we possess in the "Old Town Spring." We rode for one hundred miles over the prairies without crossing a single stream of water.

WANDERING WESTWARD.

A few days ago while in Dallas I was so fortunate as to meet a party of young men starting out west. Persuaded by my physician and friends that it would be beneficial to my health, I at once determined to accompany them. Two genial, cultivated young Baltimoreans just from college, a rising young merchant of the city of Dallas, and myself composed the health seekers of the party. Our leader is an ex-member of that celebrated fraternity the "cow boys of Texas." Physically he is the very incarnation of magnificent manhood, bold, fearless, with wonderful powers of endurance, an accomplished horseman and perfectly acquainted with all the rough and dangerous phases of western life, he is a splendid specimen of that body of men, who have no home but the saddle, who save the canopy of heaven, who associate with Indians, tarantulas and centipedes, and no friends but the winchester and navy-six.

PLEASANT PROSPECTS.

As we rode out from Dallas a most beautiful country met our gaze in every direction. For miles here stretched upon the one side thousands of acres of waving corn, upon the other downy fields of cotton. The first farm we reached contained five thousand acres of and under one fence. Two thousand were planted in cotton, the remainder in corn and wheat. Crops here are in splendid condition this year. This magnificent farm was at a fair specimen of Texas crops in general this season. As we ascended a gentle elevation I involuntarily reined in my horse and long and eagerly gazed upon the scene. For miles there lay a level plain, covered with corn and cotton, only broken at regular intervals by long rows of thickly studded undergrowth, which greatly heightened the picturesqueness of the scene. far out upon the dim and distant horizon lay the prairies, their tall xerian grass bathed in soft mellow light of the setting sun, gave them the appearance of the background of a lovely landscape painting. It was a picture upon which a limner of heaven had bestowed a most exquisite touch. Beautiful, picturesque, serene, yet lacking in every element of sublimity. A scene in contemplation which, a soft gentle inspiration, calms the mind, while the great and roic element of intellectual character, which can only be raised and developed by association with the grand and rugged features of nature's handiwork, are shed into us as if by the all of an enchanting dream. No majestic mountains lifted up their summits to meet the first beams of morning light, no mighty builders chiseled from the quarries of nature by the master mechanic of the universe, hung from stupendous heights as stepping stones to the battlements of heaven, depths opened their yawning mouths—as testimonials of the terrible sublimity of nature, and nature's God. It seems to me, if one who admires the varying scenery of these wide and extended plains could stand upon the heights of Chimney mountain and gaze upon the magnificent panorama spread out before them, or by the side of Black Creek falls where the foam crested cataract leaps downward in thundering echoes from its rock-ribbed home into the lovely bosom of the Etowah valley, he would have no more of the monotonous beauty of a Texan prairie. They are beautiful, incomparably beautiful, but it is of a character or which the mind soon tires. This evening from where I am sitting I can enjoy a scene, fuller, purer than any vision that ever dawned upon mind of a poet, and far lovelier than any elysium ever transmitted to canvases by the gorgeous pencilling of Apelles. In every direction as far as the eye can reach, extends a gently undulating plain covered by an emerald carpet upon which thousands of cattle are grazing, appearing in the dim distance like vast armies going through the evolutions of military parade.

Words cannot convey an adequate conception of this wondrous scene spread out before me this lovely summer evening, yet amid this paradise of beauty I like to linger in the wilderness, can almost cry out in agony of spirit, for water, cold water.

THE TERRIBLE TARANTULA.

My first night upon the prairie was a novel experience to me. The sun did not sink down gradually behind a bank of fleecy clouds, crowning with its last lingering rays the summits of western hills, but suddenly shut out his light leaving us in darkness upon the broad prairie. My thoughts constantly reverted to terrible descriptions I had heard of the hairy Tarantula prowling among the tall grasses, or the centipede with his hundred fangs each one laden with a virulent poison, crawling over the insensible form of the sleeper; or the treacherous rattlesnake sounding the death-note in a rapid tattoo upon its catenons, in the ear of his unconscious victim.

However only in imagination I was disturbed by these unpleasant nocturnal visitors. But as morning dawned, I was aroused by the excited voice of my young Baltimore companion "Oh Woody for heavens sake look here." I looked around and saw crawling about our pallet several of those fearful objects called Tarantulas. They present the appearance of a tremendous spider, and are far more poisonous, but by no means aggressive, crawling all around one without making an effort to bite unless attacked. They excited considerable apprehension in my mind for a while, but now after riding two hundred miles over the prairies, I can wrap my blanket around me and lie down to pleasant dreams.

PRESENT POLITICAL PROSPECTS.

In our journey westward, we arrived at the city of Fort Worth upon the day on which they received the news of the nomination of Hancock. At night a tremendous concourse of people gathered, cannon pealed, rockets blazed, and cheer after cheer went up as the announcement was made that the grand old chief had received the nomination. The nomination of Hancock is peculiarly gratifying to the people of Texas. During the hour of her humiliation, after the tide of war had rolled its surges redolent with death and sorrow around her, and the clouds of misfortune hung heavy and threatening above the lone Star, their chivalrous foeman who stood within her borders a conqueror, extended to the people of Texas and Louisiana the hand of peace and fraternization, and guaranteed to them all the rights and privileges of American citizens. Texas will show her appreciation of his magnanimity in the hour of victory by rolling up a tremendous majority for warrior statesman of Pennsylvania.

LA'S LAND.

The Indians, who once owned these broad and boundless prairies, are being rapidly driven farther west. They are receding before the mighty tide of civilization which is sweeping westward. As the iron horse rushes farther and farther into the immense solitudes of the western wilds, and the piercing rifle of the ranger, awaking the silence of their happy hunting grounds with its echoes of death, poor La sadly relinquishes his domain to the pale face, and sadly takes his journey toward the setting sun.

This State because of its immense territory and varied resources, will of necessity increase in population and wealth. The great Texas Pacific road is rapidly pushing toward the heart of this vast territory for one thousand miles, and are long the continent of America will be bound together by indissoluble bond, and the great throb of humanity beat in unison as one universal brotherhood. This is a magnificent country in some respects, but it has objectionable features. While it is true that it offers some advantages to "professional men," young men of ability, energy and education, in the remote countries where they meet but little competition. Yet outside of this one feature I have failed to discover any superiority over my own beautiful State. It is an irreconcilable enigma to me that men will leave the fertile valleys of Alabama where the crystal waters gush out in never failing streams, cold and refreshing, and when they are surrounded by a refined and cultivated society, for the dry and sultry prairies of the far west, remote from communities, for the single privilege of occasionally making a splendid crop. After a fair, candid and impartial investigation of the advantages and facilities of Texas, after riding more than two hundred miles over its most beautiful and inviting territory; after long conversations with intelligent men, from all parts of the State, I cannot find anything more attractive than the grand old mountains and fertile valleys of my own peerless Alabama. Professional young men may be assured that the people of our state have as high appreciation of ability, industry and education, as they have here, and if they are somewhat slower in attaining legal or political preferment, when it does come it will be more permanent and substantial. I have never found a more intelligent, generous, hospitable people than those of my own beloved Calhoun, and if the world was spread out before me to choose an abiding place, I would select the grand old mountain country of Alabama, where the men are all brave and the women all beautiful.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects, and does not blister. Read proof below.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER.
Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District.

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 20, 1880.

Dr. D. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—In reply to your letter, I will say that my experience with Kendall's Spavin Cure has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago, I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks, when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ring bone was forming, I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found.

Respectfully yours,
CHAS. E. PARKER.

Persistence Will Tell.

Stoughton, Mass., March 15th, 1880.

B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—In justice to you and myself, I think that I ought to let you know that I have moved my two horses with Kendall's Spavin Cure, one very lame one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off, and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all that it has done for me, its sale will be very great.

Respectfully yours,
CHAS. E. PARKER.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Kelly's Island Erie Co. O. Mo. 28 1880.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure on a bone spavin, and am pleased to report that it has taken the enlargement completely off. It took only one bottle to perform the cure. I am confident if it is properly used, it will do all you claim for it.

Yours truly,
C. M. LINCOLN.

STATEMENT MADE UNDER OATH.

To WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.—In the year 1875, I treated with Kendall's Spavin Cure, a bone spavin of several months' growth, nearly half as large as a hen's egg and completely stopped the lameness and removed the enlargement. I have worked the horse ever since very hard, and he never has been lame, nor could I enter any day's riding in the line of the hook joints since I treated him with Kendall's spavin Cure.

R. A. GAINS.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

On Human Flesh.

PATTEN'S MILLS, WASHINGTON CO. N. Y., Feb. 21, 1878.

B. J. KENDALL, M. D. DEAR SIR:—The particular case on which I used your Spavin Cure was a malignant ankle spavin of sixteen months' standing, and had tried many things, but in vain. Your Spavin Cure put the foot to the ground again, and for the first time since hurt, in a natural position. For a family liniment it excels anything we ever used.

Yours truly,
REV. M. P. DELL,
Pastor M. E. Church, Patten's Mills N. Y.

Kendall's Spavin Cure is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, get it in penetrating and powerful to reach every deep seated pain or enlargement such as swelling, splinters, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used, for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for Illustrated Circular, which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for best as well as to make Price, $1 per bottle or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vermont.

A CARD.

About three years ago we were requested by some of our employees to purchase sewing machines for them. After a careful examination of all the leading machines we were convinced that the "White" was the best. We bought three, and without special effort on our part, the demand has grown so that we are now selling

Sight Restored!

The undersigned, having had remarkable success in treating numerous cases of eye disease, catarrh, dimness of sight, and persons suffering from any inflammation of the eye, ear, nose, throat, etc., desires to make known to the public how such sufferers may avail themselves of his wonderful remedies. The following certificates are obtained with solicited testimonials from persons desiring treatment can be visited by mail preferred.

A. J. KERR,
White Plains, Ala.

DAVISVILLE, ALA., Dec. 12th, 1879.

This is to certify that Dr. A. J. Kerr has been treating my eyes for one year, and has much better—think they will get entirely well. Cheerfully recommend his treatment to the public.

J. F. DAVIS.

This is to certify that Lucinda McDowell's eye became affected by loss of sight four or five years ago, and remained so till three or four weeks since, when she went under the treatment of Mr. Andrew Kerr, and in six or eight days afterward she could see with that eye as well as ever.

WASHINGTON WILLIAMS,
—certify that this is a true statement with regard to my daughter.

JNO. W. McDOWELL,
Dec. 26th, 1877.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify that my grand-daughter, Nancy Griffin, was afflicted with sore eyes for three years, to such extent that she could scarcely see to go about. Six months ago Mr. A. J. Kerr came and took her under treatment, and to our astonishment, she could soon see to thread the finest needle or do any kind of sewing. I hereby recommend Mr. Kerr's medicine to any person similarly afflicted.

Sight Restored!

The undersigned, having had remarkable success in treating numerous cases of eye disease, catarrh, dimness of sight, and persons suffering from any inflammation of the eye, ear, nose, throat, etc., desires to make known to the public how such sufferers may avail themselves of his wonderful remedies. The following certificates are obtained with solicited testimonials from persons desiring treatment can be visited by mail preferred.

A. J. KERR,
White Plains, Ala.

DAVISVILLE, ALA., Dec. 12th, 1879.

This is to certify that Dr. A. J. Kerr has been treating my eyes for one year, and has much better—think they will get entirely well. Cheerfully recommend his treatment to the public.

J. F. DAVIS.

This is to certify that Lucinda McDowell's eye became affected by loss of sight four or five years ago, and remained so till three or four weeks since, when she went under the treatment of Mr. Andrew Kerr, and in six or eight days afterward she could see with that eye as well as ever.

WASHINGTON WILLIAMS,
—certify that this is a true statement with regard to my daughter.

JNO. W. McDOWELL,
Dec. 26th, 1877.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify that my grand-daughter, Nancy Griffin, was afflicted with sore eyes for three years, to such extent that she could scarcely see to go about. Six months ago Mr. A. J. Kerr came and took her under treatment, and to our astonishment, she could soon see to thread the finest needle or do any kind of sewing. I hereby recommend Mr. Kerr's medicine to any person similarly afflicted.

Given under my hand and dater as mentioned

Duty of the Hour.

If over the time has, is or will come, when it is needful for the citizens of this country to do their full, honest duty to themselves, their posterity and God, this must be that eventful time.
For at present we are surrounded with evils more destructive of free and honest government, than at any previous time, and now the voices of our wisest and best men are calling to the people in silver tones to stop, to reflect, to stay the tide of reckless independence, in other words communism, and place our liberties on a sure foundation, above the slimy touch of those, who, under the pretense of benefiting us, would turn all our long cherished hopes into bitterness and disappointment.
There are men who will nurse their disappointments and prejudices and warm into life a spirit that would corrode the silver in an angel's heart or cause the man in the moon to shut one eye in passing over their little ranch.
Some are painfully struck with the idea they will not be noticed unless they go against all common sense and previous training.
Others go stalking abroad, preaching "independence," when perhaps they have been and are not only dependent on others for what few half-fledged ideas they may possess, but also on the charities of the world for food and clothing, tobacco and whiskey.
We are all dependent creatures, to a certain extent, and for self protection demand organization, and those who seek to break down these organizations strike at the very life of society, religion and liberty. These destroyers should not be tolerated, should be driven back into the slums of ignominy and silence from which they emerged, and support, strong and uncompromising, should be given to organization.
Let the cry go round to support the nominees of our party, and our best qualified men for the various offices to be filled. Be sure that you support true, staunch Democrats, who have never flinched nor swerved from the line of duty, turned radical or independent, men whose highest ambition is to do their duty through the heavens fall.
We should all be careful in our selections as the welfare of our Country makes it imperative duty resting on each citizen to choose the best qualified, whether relation or not, neighbor or stranger; and if we come to the polls on Monday with this determination we need not be deceived of the result.
GENERAL HANCOCK'S father, Mr. H. B. Hancock, of Morrisville, Pa., is said to have been a large, handsome, resolute man, a good lawyer, a Baptist Deacon, and a Democrat of the deepest dye. Mrs. Hancock was a gentle lady, and their three boys were highly esteemed. They lived in a brick house of modest dimensions, in one part of which Mr. Hancock had his law office, and in another part of which Mrs. Hancock conducted a millinery shop. As a boy, General Hancock was a large, fine looking person, a little clumsy yet well proportioned, a lover of athletic sports and pranks, and favorite among his acquaintances. He was not remarkably brilliant in his studies, but was a good average scholar. He was selected for appointment to West Point because of his manliness of character and fine physique, and because he was thought to possess the element of a soldier.

Tribute of Respect.
To the Worshipful Master Wardens and Brethren of Ragan Lodge, No. 341, Davisville Calhoun County Alabama.
Whereas God in his wisdom, has removed by death our beloved brother, Eli M. Wright.
RESOLVED: That we bow in humble submission to his will, knowing that he doeth all things well.
RESOLVED: That in this sad dispensation this Lodge has lost a good member, the church an active member, his family a faithful and affectionate son and husband, the community a valuable citizen.
RESOLVED: That we hereby tender our sympathies to his family and friends, and trust that our loss is his eternal gain.
RESOLVED: That a copy of these resolutions be handed to his wife, and that a copy of the same be spread upon our minutes.
RESOLVED: That a copy be presented to the Editor of the Jacksonville Republican, with the request that he publish the same.

WEAVER'S STATEMENT.
July 25th, 1880.
MR. L. W. GRANT.

I had the pleasure of attending the exercises of Professor Caters school, which came off at this place on the day and night of the 15th inst. and I cannot refrain from penning you a few lines as to its merits and proceedings.
After passing a splendid examination during the day, the night exercises consisted of speaking, compositions, music and addresses. The speaking of all the boys was very good, I could make special mention, but will only say they all acquitted themselves with marked credit; while the young ladies did equally as well on compositions; it was a high compliment to Prof. Caters, it evinced his high qualification of training and teaching. He is a gentleman of christian virtue and his literary and musical attainments cannot be surpassed. During the exercises we had music by Miss Mamie Adams, who is teaching a music school here. The musical strains were in thundering tones that filled the air with delightful melody. After the exercises of the school concluded Mr. Oscar Hall of Munford, delivered an address suited to the occasion, and he was sublimely eloquent and pointed; then came the thanks of our very worthy townsman D. F. Weaver who passed in classic language many eulogies on Prof. Caters for his systematic government and rapid advancement of all students in their various studies, which accorded with views of all his patrons. Taking everything together that attended the exercises, it was one of the most pleasant occasions of the kind I ever attended. The girls and boys were dressed in costly attire which excited much admiration and credit. There was about 200 in attendance.
AMERICUS.

A general survey of the whole country shows that the crop of campaign lies will be an abundant crop this season. In Maine a goodly portion of last year's stock remains on hand to make up for any lack in the approaching harvest. In the Southern States, very little acreage had been put down, the market being abundantly supplied from the North, and as such things are looked upon as a luxury rather than a necessity, the demand below Mason and Dixon's line will prove less than heretofore. New York promises a full crop, while Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois follow in the order named. The District of Columbia has been chosen as distributing centre, the long experience of dealers there peculiarly fitting it for the office.
(Boston Transcript.)
New York, July 18.—John H. Christianity, who says he is twenty-six years old and a son of ex-Senator Christianity, now minister to Peru, applied on Saturday last to Brooklyn justice to be sent to some institution where he would be taken care of. He said that he was broken down physically, mentally and financially by drunkenness and that his father would pay all the expenses of caring for him. He showed letters and documents to prove that he is ex-Senator Christianity's son. The justice committed him to the incarcerated home at Fort Hamilton, near this city, for six months.
Charles W. Coe, a Connecticut Republican, has pronounced for Hancock. So has Gen. Patrick H. Jones, Republican ex-P. M. of New York city; and Col. George Williamson, late U. S. Minister to Central America, and the most influential Republican in Louisiana.
Is it estimated by those intimate with Mr. Hays and the conductors of the White House, that by the 4th of March next, he will be able to put aside about a hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars of the salary Mr. Tilden should have been drawing. The largest sum he has contributed for any purpose, was $1,000 "tush money" to Cassanova of the Louisiana Returning Board.
There were 90 deaths from sun stroke in New York, on the first day of July.
Gen. Hood's youngest child, Anna Gertrude died near Columbus, Ga., last week.

One of the singular incidents of Dr. Tanner's starving process is that while he has picked up in flesh, his stature has been reduced. At the outset careful measurement showed that he was five feet and a half inches tall; last Friday equally careful measurement showed that he was barely five feet three and a half inches in height. The doctor's explanation of this curious fact is as follows: There are twenty-four bones in the spinal column, and between these bones are 23 layers of cartilage. It derives its substance from absorption. There are no blood vessels in this cartilage. Consequently when the supply of food is cut off these layers of cartilage are the first portions of the body to suffer. These are capable of a shrinkage of one quarter of an inch in thickness, so that a man might lose as much as three inches in height from this cause.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most successful remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects, and does not blister. Read proof below.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER.

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District.

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 20, 1880.
Dr. J. Kendall & Co., Gents: In reply to your letter, I will say that my experience with Kendall's Spavin Cure has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago, I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks, when he became better, but when I put him on the road he got worse, when I discovered that a ring bone was forming. I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found.
Respectfully yours,
CHAS. E. PARKER.

Persistence Will Tell.

Stoughton, Mass., March 16th, 1880.
B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents: In justice to you and myself, I think that I ought to let you know that I have removed the bone spavin which Kendall's Spavin Cure cured very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off, and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It's a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me, its sale will be very great.
Respectfully yours,
CHAS. E. PARKER.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Kelley Island, Erie co. O. Me. 28 1880.
Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents: I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure on a bone spavin, and am pleased to report that it has taken the enlargement completely off. It took only one bottle to perform the cure. I am confident if it is properly used, it will do all you claim for it.
Yours truly,
C. M. LINCOLN.

STATEMENT MADE UNDER OATH.

To Whom It May Concern:—In the year 1875, I treated with Kendall's Spavin Cure, a bone spavin of several months' growth, nearly half as large as a hen's egg, and completely stopped the lameness and removed the enlargement. I have worked the horse ever since very hard, and he never has been lame, nor could I ever see any difference in the size of the bone joints since I treated him with Kendall's spavin Cure.
R. A. GAINS,
Bosbury Falls Vt., Feb. 25th, 1879.
Sworn and subscribed to before me this 25th day of Feb. A. D. 1879.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

On Human Flesh.

PATTON'S MILLS, WASHINGTON CO. N. Y., Feb. 21, 1878.
E. J. Kendall, M. D., Dear Sir:—The particular case on which I used your Spavin Cure was a malignant ankle spavin of sixteen months' standing. I had tried many things, but in vain. Your Spavin Cure put the foot to the ground again, and for the first time since hurt, in a natural position. For a family liniment it excels anything we ever used.
Yours truly,
REV. M. P. BELL,
Pastor M. E. Church, Patton's Mills, N. Y.

Kendall's Spavin Cure is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement such as spavins, splints, curbs, callosities, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild, yet certain in its effects.
Send address for Illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. This remedy has ever met with such universal success to our knowledge, for least as well as our Price, $1 per bottle or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO.,

About three years ago we were requested by some of our employees to purchase sewing machines for them. After a careful examination of all the leading machines we were convinced that the "White" was the best sewing machine manufactured, and we bought six. These instantly created a demand for more, and without special effort on our part, the demand has grown so that we are now selling

and our sales are continually increasing.

This is the best evidence of the superior merits of the "White."

Steamers of this line leave Memphis for Cairo, Louisville and Cincinnati Monday, Wednesday and Friday, at 6 o'clock, p. m., connecting at Cincinnati with Railroad and Steamers for all Eastern, Northern and Western points; passing through tickets to all points—Chicago, Toledo, Buffalo, Richmond, New York, Washington City, Philadelphia and Boston.

Passenger Tourists will find the La Belle River Route safe, delightful and economical. Rates by this line cheaper than any other first-class route. Meals and accommodations free. Baggage checked through. For full information apply to R. W. LIGHTBURN.

General Freight and Ticket Agent, No. 7, Monroe St., Memphis, Tenn. Passengers can rely on a splendid trip by this line, as the steamers are all first class, having been expressly built for the accommodation of passengers. Each steamer carries a string-band.

Sight Restored!

The undersigned having had remarkable success in treating numerous cases of sore eyes, catarrh, dimness of sight, and persons suffering from any inflammation of the eyes, impaired vision, etc., desires to make known to the public how such sufferers may avail themselves of his wonderful remedies.

The following certificates—obtained without solicitation—speak for themselves. Persons desiring treatment can be visited by us if preferred. A. J. KERR, White Plains, Ala.

DAVISVILLE, ALA., Dec. 19th, 1879.

This is to certify that Dr. A. J. Kerr has been treating my eyes for one, and they are much better—think they will get entirely well. Cheerfully recommend his treatment to the public.

J. F. DAVIS.

This is to certify that Lucinda McDowell's eyes were affected by loss of sight four or five years ago, and remained so till three or four weeks since, when she went under the treatment of Mr. Andrew Kerr, and in six or eight days afterward she could see with that eye as well as ever.

—I certify that this is a true statement with regard to my daughter.

JNO. W. McDOWELL.

Dec. 26th, 1877.

STATE OF ALABAMA, Etowah County, 7th Jan. 1880.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify that my grand-daughter, Nancy Griffith, was afflicted with sore eyes for three years, to such an extent that she could scarcely see to go about. Six months ago Mr. A. J. Kerr came and took her under treatment, and to our astonishment, she could soon see to thread the finest needle or do any kind of sewing. I hereby recommend Mr. Kerr's medicine to any person similarly afflicted.

Given under my hand and date as above mentioned

W. N. CHANDLER.

CANCERS CURED.

Scrofula, Scrofulous Ulcers, and Cancers are Curable.

Dr. S. C. Williams, after an experience of more than thirty years, is fully convinced that, when applied in time, he can cure the above named diseases. As to his success in the treatment of the same, and as to his standing as a physician, he would respectfully refer to the following named gentlemen:

Dr. A. Pelham, Alexandria, Ala.
Dr. J. Y. Nesbit, Jacksonville, Ala.
Dr. B. S. Evans, White Plains, Ala.
Judge M. J. Turnley, Gadsden, Ala.
J. W. Whiteley, Esq., Rabbit Town, Ala.
And to the physicians, merchants, and ministers of Oxford, Ala., also to his former patients everywhere. Charges moderate.

Go to the polls and vote.

Fine rains this week. Hence crops are looking better.

Capt. Leary E. Box and Judge Whitlock spoke in the Court House Thursday.

MARRIED on the 22nd inst. at the residence of the bride's father by the Hon. L. W. Cannon, Mr. J. A. Calahan to Miss Ella McGinnis.

GIN FILE—I have just received one of the "Georgia Gin Files," which does its work with files. Parties wishing gins filed can correspond with me. L. A. WEAVER.

Rains have been general and the crop prospect brightens.

The Liberty Pole erected in Oxford is 108 feet high above the ground, the beautiful banner of our country can be seen for miles.

Much credit is due the undertakers of such a patriotic enterprise.

A Hancock club is now in order here. Proceed your patriots to enlist. Let the good work go on and victory will be ours.

The Hop at the Female Academy, Wednesday night was the most delightful affair of the season.

From the looks of some of the boys—something was lost and something gained. A strange place for trading, but the object was a "laudable" one, as the deacon said; when he killed his neighbors, in order to keep it from spreading flesh under the church house.

Personal

Miss Lena Parr of Gadsden, near Jacksonville, is again in her mountain home. She is stopping with the family of Mrs. M. E. Francis.

Miss Mary Pierson, of Cave Spring, Ga., and Misses Mable Baker and Emma Forney of Selma, are visiting the family of Capt. Jno. M. Wyly.

Miss Carrie Wilson of Atlanta, is visiting the family of Maj. Peyton Rowan.

Miss Agnes Winburn of Talladega, is visiting the family of Dr. J. Y. Nisbet. She will leave for home next week.

Candidates can now sit themselves down upon the grassy sward and count the cost of priceless reputation.

REWARD

The thief is a man about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches high, sandy hair, heavy mustache, red complexion, goes by the name of Jerry Smith, very large pimples on his face, went on neck; he is about 40 years old, a few gray hairs on his head, weighs about 160 or 170 pounds.

Also a woman about 18 years old, slim spare-built woman, black hair and eyes. To any one giving any information concerning these people, will be handsomely rewarded.

JOHN PATTERSON, Jacksonville, Ala.

With pain we notice the death of Mr. Jas. B. Hudson in Birmingham on the 25th inst. He was raised here, and many who read this will drop a silent tear as they think of boy-hood days. To his bereaved relatives we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

CHAMBERS'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.

15 VOLS. OVER 13,000 PAGES, Price During July, $6.25.

Among the most useful and complete works ever published, for the lovers of good books by the Literary Revolution, perhaps the most wonderful is the production of this great encyclopedia at a merely nominal cost. It is a veritable reprint of the best English encyclopedia in 15 beautiful volumes—clear nonpareil type—handsomely bound in cloth for $7.50 the same printed on finer heavier paper with margins and bound in half Russia gilt top, price $15.00. The first ten volumes are ready for delivery. Vol. 11 will be ready July 10. The remaining volumes will be completed by October next.

$6.25 An Amazing Offer. $6.25

The more widely and rapidly these volumes are scattered, the greater is their influence in inducing other purchasers of this and our many standard publications. Accordingly we give special terms to early subscribers. To all, whose orders and money are received during the month of July we will supply the 15 volumes in cloth for $6.25 and in half Russia gilt top for $12.50. To any one sending from any one place where we have no special agent [usually the leading bookseller of the town] a club of five orders we will allow a commission of 10 per cent. The volumes issued will be sent at once by express and the remaining volumes when completed.

A specimen volume in cloth will be sent postpaid for 50 cents or in half Russia gilt top for 1.00.

The HANCOCK'S ENCYCLOPEDIA comprises the first 15 volumes of our Library of Universal Knowledge and the remaining volumes complete in themselves will be sold separately when published.

The Convention of the Y. M. C. A. of North Alabama, met in Cross Plains July 12th 1880. Jeff Smith was called to the Chair, Robt. C. Johnson was requested to act as Secretary. The Convention then proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year, which are as follows:

Robt. Johnson Pres., Thomas A. Howell Sec. Owing to the political excitement the Convention was not well attended. It was thought best by the Convention to hold another Convention this year. There were five Associations represented in the convention. Ladiga Association, Shady Grove, Bethel, White Plains and Howells Chapel.

Howells Chapel was elected for the place for holding the next convention.

Matisen LeGrand was elected Chairman Executive committee.

A STANDING OFFER.

The Republican has always supported the nominees of the Democratic party since the war. The fact that its editor stands in that relation to the party in the present canvass makes no difference. The paper cannot be silent in the canvass for this cause; but we do not want to give the slightest ground for being charged with taking any unfair advantage in this canvass, and we hereand now make a standing offer of the columns of the paper, free of charge, to our opponent, whenever he feels aggrieved by anything the paper may say, and desires to reply to it.

AGRICULTURE.

TRAINING HEIFERS.—It is a very easy matter to train a heifer to stand quietly to be milked, but it is an easier matter to train them to jump, kick and run. The way to teach them to stand still is to always require them to do so. If there is aught to hinder a wild heifer from running, and if her fear prompt her to run, she can and will run. On the contrary if she cannot run, in a short time she will be a tame animal. It is a matter of habit, and habit is one of the most powerful influences in this world for either better or ill. If you want to transform a wild heifer into a well-behaved well-trained cow, you must be patient and exhibit temper. Never strike or kick her. She must first of all get acquainted with you, and learn that you will not hurt her. She must learn not to fear you. If, in winter, it is best to milk in the stable, make a little fuss and a few harsh motions as possible; handle her very gently. Be careful not to pinch the teats. This is the greatest source of trouble. A cow naturally wishes to be rid of her milk. She stands quietly until some careless milker gives a squeeze that hurts, when she kicks and runs. By following such a course a few times the habit will be confirmed. The best way to manage, if you have no stable, is to have a tall, well-fenced yard, and teach your heifers to stand for milking in that, or, next best, to teach them, using them very quietly. No man or boy is fit to handle animals unless he can control them and control himself. Neither is it right to chastise the ignorant.

THE AMERICAN VS. THE ENGLISH DAIRY.—We have on previous occasions, says the London Evening Standard, pointed out that we in England were losing ground in the race, and that America was gaining it, and that the difference was due to the improved methods and appliances in general use in the latter country. The disparity is only less marked because the soil, the herbage, and the climate in this country are each and all better than those in America for cheese-making purposes. It is purely a question, then, of practical ability, superior management, and we say so advisedly. Ten or a dozen years ago the quality of American cheese sent to this country was such as to cause our own cheese-makers to smile; but now the smile is on the other side of the face. At that time no one thought for a moment that we had anything to fear from the quality, whatever we had to do from the volume, of American competition in cheese; but now we are beaten all along the line. And this is not so much because the quality of English cheese on the average is lower than it used to be, as that the quality of American is so greatly improved. Careful inquiry into scientific principles and scrupulous attention to details of management are the means by which our American friends have so much bettered their dairy products. Increased knowledge, quickened energies, and incessant activity in adopting every improvement in appliances and modes of management, will allow us to compete successfully.

Cows.—Treat them generously and kindly, but do not keep them fat, unless they are to be turned off into beef. A cow is a machine, a laboratory for converting raw materials into milk. If little begotten, little will be productive. All animals should have exercise, especially those kept for breeding. Some of them are naturally lazy, but they will be better for stirring about in the open air. It is cruel to keep animals tied up or shut up for days at a time. They need light, too. Direct sunlight exerts a powerful influence for good on animals as well as on plants. Do not overlook a good supply of pure water two or three times a day, or good ventilation and proper cleaning of stables. When the ground is frozen and covered with snow, it is well to cover the pleasant days, to scatter the fodder and allow the stock plenty of room to pick it up; but when it is muddy, no one but a sloven will fodder on the ground. Good racks should be made for the sake of convenience and economy.

REPAIRS IN ROADS AND PATHS.—It should be remembered that the worst spot in a piece of road, whether public or private way, measures the capacity of the team for hauling loads over it, or in other words, a team can draw between two given points only so much as it can draw over the hardest spot, whether that be a steep hill or a muddy slough hole, no matter how perfect the other portions of the way may be. Any man would be considered a fool who should keep a good pair of horses for hauling loads over a muddy slough, when a one-horse wagon, drawing but half load at a time, and yet that is just what we are all doing, who, year after year, haul manure, farm products and merchandise over roads that, by the expenditure of a small amount of labor, would be so good as to haul double the weight we now draw. April is oftentimes a good month for making repairs in roads and paths.

The ordinary coloring matters used in cements usually injure the setting power more or less, and fail to produce pure tints. According to experiments made by a German chemist, however, this difficulty may be overcome, and permanent color washes be produced, by mixing equal volumes of the dry pigment and burned and washed flint with milk of lime, a little water glass being advantageously added. The thus produced is described as very agreeable, and, if stable mineral colors are used, as durable as the cement itself; surfaces of great beauty are produced by employing finely powdered marble and flint, with the faintest tints of chrome green. The wash is applied as soon as possible after the cement has set, and, if practicable, in one coat only, but if two are necessary the second is made with the addition of water glass, in order to be effective.

In an essay on unguent strains, a recent scientific writer describes a method that may be resorted to for detecting the contact of micrometer screws, and which is of value, as it is applicable to very many physical and mechanical experiments. In a test of this operation the micrometer screw had sixty threads to an inch, and its head was graduated to 300 parts, so that the unit of measurement was the one 18,000th of an inch. The iron bar, micrometer screw, and a telephone were put in the circuit of a weak Leclanché cell. When the screw was turned up to loose contact with the bar, the familiar boiling sound of a too sensitive microphone was heard, which ceased the instant firm contact was made, the change to silence being abrupt and sharply defined.

An engineer says, that from one-half to three-fourths of a pound of borax, put in the boiler, is a good remedy for boiler-scale. After putting in the borax he advised to run the engine a week and then blow off, when the scale can be scraped out from the bottom of the boiler and fire-box.

DOMESTIC.

ICE CREAM WITH EGGS.—Two quarts new milk, two eggs, one tablespoon corn starch, beat the eggs, wet the corn starch and cook it in the milk, then stir in the eggs and cook, but do not let them curdle, one and a half pounds sugar. Cook the night before so it will be thoroughly cool, add two teaspoons vanilla. If you wish strawberry flavor to the cream, mash and strain them, and add sugar, one pint of berries, for ounces of sugar to two quarts of cream. Put the cream into the freezer and set in a tub or pail, fill the pail with broken ice, strew coarse salt in large quantities between each layer of ice, taking care that it does not get into the cream. Break the ice by putting it in an old grain sack and pounding with an axe. As the cream freezes scrape it from the bottom and sides of the freezer with a knife or spoon. A large size lard can or tin pail may be used instead of a freezer, but in that case the cream must be often scraped from the sides and well-beaten, to make it fine-grained.

Boston Brown Bread.—Half pint flour, one cup corn meal, half pint rye flour, three potatoes, one teaspoonful salt, one tablespoonful brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls Baking Powder, half pint water. Sift flour, corn meal, rye flour, sugar, salt and powder together thoroughly; wash and well beat two mealy potatoes, rub them through the sieve, diluting with the water. When this is quite cold use it to mix the flour, etc., into a batter like cake; pour it into a well greased mold having a cover. Place it in a saucepan half full of boiling water, when the loaf will simmer one hour without the water getting into it. Remove it, then, take off the cover, finish cooking it by baking in a fairly hot oven thirty minutes.

The Greatest Blessing.—A simple, pure, harmless remedy, that cures every ailment, prevents disease by keeping the blood pure, stomach regular, kidneys and liver active, is the greatest blessing ever conferred upon man. Hop Bitters that remedy, and its proprietors are being blessed by thousands who have been saved and cured by it. Will you try it? See another column.—Engle.

LOBSTER, CROQUETS.—Mince the flesh of a lobster to the size of small dice; season with pepper, salt, spices and as much cayenne as will rest on the point of a trussing needle. Melt a piece of butter in a saucepan, mix with it a tablespoonful of flour, when the lobster and some chopped parsley; moisten with a little fish stock until the mixture looks like minced veal; then stir into it off the fire a couple of yolks of eggs, and put it by to get cold. When nearly so shape it into the form of croquets, egg them, roll them in baked bread-crumbs. After the lapse of an hour egg and bread-crumbs them again, taking care to preserve the shape. Alter a little time fry them a nice color in hot lard.

The purest article is the cheapest in the end. Dobbins' Electric Soap, made by Cragin & Co., Philadelphia, is perfectly pure, snow-white, and preserves clothes washed with it. Be sure and try it.

TEA BISCUITS.—One quart flour, one teaspoonful salt, half teaspoonful Baking Powder, one tablespoonful lard, one pint milk. Sift together flour, salt, sugar and powder; rub in the lard cold; add the milk and form into a smooth, consistent dough. Flour it, roll it, turn out the dough, roll it out to the thickness of three-quarters of an inch, cut with a small round cutter; lay them close together on a greased baking tin, wash over with milk, bake in good hot oven twenty minutes.

MILK-YEAST BREAD.—Take one cupful of milk, add hot water to warm the milk; mix sifted flour to make a thin batter; let stand over night in a warm place; in the morning add one half cupful of butter and flour to sufficient stiffen for bread, kneading thoroughly; fill pans half full, and in a warm place allow the loaves to rise to the top of the pans; bake in a steady oven, not too hot, one hour.

If you want your chickens to grow fast feed them on oatmeal scalded with sweet or sour milk. Don't make the feed wet or sloppy, nor give more at one time than will be eaten up clean. Only prepare as much at once as will be all eaten before any fermentation takes place in it. With oatmeal can not be fed, fine cornmeal or cracked wheat, similarly treated and administered will answer a very good purpose.

BOSTON CREAM CAKES.—Half pound butter, three-fourths pound of flour, eight eggs, one pint of water; stir the butter into the water, which should be warm; set it on the fire in a pan, let it boil, stirring it often; when it boils, stir in the flour; beat the eggs light and stir into this cooled paste; bake in small buttered pans ten minutes, filling them half full.

SWEET APPLE PUDDING.—One quart of scalded milk, half pint of Indian meal, cup of molasses, spoonful of salt, sweet apples. Mix these all together, and cut the apples (pared) in small pieces and stir in. Bake not less than three hours in a moderate oven.

VEAL SWEETBREAD.—Scald in salt and water and remove stringy part; put in cold water a few minutes, drop it in cloth, dip in egg and bread crumbs, fry brown in butter; take out, pour in a pan a cup of cream, a little chopped parsley, pepper, salt, and a little flour; boil up and pour over the breads; serve hot.

The poetry of Babyhood is turned into the blindest kind of prose when one has to walk the floor all night to ceaseless music of a colic-suffering baby. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup prevents all such scenes and troubles by its unfailing influence.

ICE CREAM WITH EGGS.—Take all the cream you can spare, add new milk enough to make the desired quantity, sweeten and flavor to taste; both the sweetening and flavoring seem to "freeze out." It desired a little arrow-root or corn starch may be cooked in a little milk and stirred in.

PHILADELPHIA ICE CREAM.—Dissolve one pound of white sugar in two quarts of fresh pure cream, one tablespoon extract. When finished, drain off the water, repack with ice and salt, cover with a woolen blanket and let stand two or three hours.

Get rid of ORE before you contract another one. It is a good remedy for boiler-scale. After putting in the boiler he advised to run the engine a week and then blow off, when the scale can be scraped out from the bottom of the boiler and fire-box.

HUMOROUS.

"I'm goin' right in this river," said he, staggering toward the string piece, as the policeman clutched him by the collar. "Lemme go, I tellyer. You emme go, I'm just goin' right in this river and I'm goin' ter drown myself of Simmon's Liver Regulator after each meal, the bowels will be gently moved, as if no medicine had been moved. Regularly in taking the medicine will effect a permanent cure. One yer hold; lemmealone, I'm goin' to bust a hole in mortality."

But the policeman laughed him off. "Say, of man, yersaved my life," said the would-be suicide, as he knocked his hat over his eyes. "You'r a square feller. Now lemme go to bed. Y'ear me? Lemme gohome. Got two ten dollar bills? Got 'em? He had a ten and two fives, just to humor the man.

"Good'nuff. That'll do. Gimme the ten," and he pulled out a twenty dollar bill. "Gimme the ten, y'ear? Goin' to make yer present ten dollars. Take this and gimme ten. Yer saved my life, this and gimme ten. Yer saved my life, the policeman gave him the ten and took the twenty. He didn't want the money, but the exhibition of gratitude showed a dawning interest in a life that should be encouraged. Then bidding him good night the policeman walked off.

In one of the Western States a case was tried, and at its termination the Judge charged the jury, and they retired for consultation. Hour after hour passed and no verdict was brought in. The Judge's dinner hour arrived, and he became hungry and impatient. Upon inquiry he learned that the obstinate jurymen were holding out against eleven. That he could not stand, and he ordered the twelve men to be brought before him. He told them that, in his charge to them, he had plainly stated the case and the law that the verdict ought to be unanimous, and the man who permitted his individual opinion to weigh against the judgment of eleven men of wisdom was unfit and disqualified every agent to act in the capacity of jurymen. At the end of this excited harangue a little squeaky voice came from one of the jurymen. He said: "Judge, including me and a Boon to me to say a word?" Permission being given, he added: "May it please your Honor, I am the only man on your side!"

Given up by Doctors. "Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy?" "I assure you it is true that he is entirely cured, and with nothing but Hop Bitters; and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die!" "Well-a-day! That is remarkable! I will try it today and get good for my poor George—I know hops are good."—Salem Post.

They were sitting about the stove at the grocery listening to the yarns of an old sailor, and the ancient mariner had just remarked: "The next we needed was a right whale, and he was an ugly one and stove all three of our boats and killed the second mate," when a sad-eyed man in the corner timidly observed, "It seems to me that instead of a right whale you tackled the wrong one. And then they all rose and moved and moved and moved and the ancient mariner was so mad that he tried to kick a saw-horse and barked his shin in nine places.

A few years ago the State Attorney of a northern county in Vermont, although a man of great legal ability, was very fond of the bottle. On one occasion an important criminal case was called on by the clerk, but the attorney, with owl-like gravity, kept his chair. "Mr. Attorney, is the State ready to proceed?" said the Judge. "Yes he is—no your honor," stammered the lawyer; "the State is not—in a state to try this case to-day; the State, your honor, is—drunk!"

A SCHOOL teacher who had just been telling the story of David ended with, "And at this happened over three thousand years ago." A little cherub, his blue eyes opening wide with wonder, said, after a moment's thought, "Oh dear, warm, what a memory you have got!"

"Is Christianity a Failure?" It is not, of course—especially to the man who has a good day morning with a fishing-rod disguised as a cane, and to the woman who has a $35 new bonnet and is driven to church in her own carriage, with a coachman rigged out in livery.

VEGETINE has restored thousands to health who had been long and painful sufferers.

It is estimated that the time wasted by women of the United States in looking under beds for men at night if devoted to work would result, in a year's time, in making over 47,000 pairs of suspenders for the heathen.

MARY BEANE deemed herself neglected by her lover at Denver, and shot the man with whom she found him playing cards when he ought to have been visiting her. This shows the wickedness of playing cards.

SOME day or other a man will jump into the arena of life with a successful dying-machine, and invite all wise old heads to take a ride.

A SURE cure for corns—Kick your corn through a window-glass and the pain is gone forever.

CLAMS and bivalves—"Steam" valves before cooking, and "safety" valves when not eaten to excess.

The age of Miracles is past, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will not raise the dead, will not cure you if your lungs are half wasted by consumption, or your system sinking under cancerous disease. It is, however, unsurpassed both as a peccatorial and alternative, and will cure destitute and severe diseases of the throat and lungs, coughs, and bronchial affections. By virtue of its wonderful alterative properties it cleanses and enriches the blood, thus curing pimples, blotches, and eruptions and causing even great eating ulcers to heal. Sold by druggists.

CONSTIPATION has been called the father of diseases, therefore it should not be regarded as a trifling ailment. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to rest or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails. Take a half-tablespoonful of Simmon's Liver Regulator after each meal, the bowels will be gently moved, as if no medicine had been moved. Regularly in taking the medicine will effect a permanent cure. One yer hold; lemmealone, I'm goin' to bust a hole in mortality."
